Before Arrival
- Identify the courses the new faculty member is expected to teach.
- Provide sample syllabi and course outlines from other faculty. Inform of requirements related to syllabus creation.
- Discuss office hours and related departmental requirements.
- Discuss opportunities related to teaching assistantships.
- Inform of textbook and reading pack ordering resources, as needed.

Two Weeks Before Classes
- Encourage new faculty member to meet with Teaching Assistants.
- Inform of Campus Technology Services IT Services for Faculty and Staff, including their ICON support, Instructional Design, Student Instructional Technology Assistants, Digital Media Solutions, and Learning Space Technology resources.
- Inform new faculty of departmental resources and support for teaching.

First Month
- Attend first class session of semester to briefly and enthusiastically introduce the new faculty member to their students. Research shows this strategy is particularly important for faculty in underrepresented groups on campus (e.g., faculty of color, women faculty, international faculty), given the presence of potential bias among students.
- Inform of the UI Center for Teaching resources and workshops and encourage participation.

First Year
- Encourage classroom observation of teaching.
- Explain process for annual review of teaching.
- Partner with senior faculty to co-teach course.
- Assign teaching advisor.
- Encourage understanding of role within full curriculum.
- Facilitate early career faculty’s observation of senior colleagues in their classrooms.
- Direct new faculty to effective teaching resources, including the UI Center for Teaching’s Handbook for Teaching Assistants and Tools for Teaching by Barbara Gross Davis.
- Recommend a formative, mid-semester evaluation of class. The UI Center for Teaching offers Classroom Assessment by Student Interview (CLASI) services.

First Three Years
- Use the annual review to identify strengths and areas for improvement.
- Develop teaching plan and ensure an equitable mix of classes (e.g., core courses, limited new preps, seminar topics).

| members with International Programs and area resources.
  • Ensure that the new faculty member is signed up for the Human Resources New Faculty/Staff Orientation, and that they are aware of on-line information about benefit choices, payroll system, and leave policies. | Communicate your enthusiasm for the new faculty member joining your department and show interest in her/his research. Refer to the “Top Ten Things New Faculty Want to Hear From Colleagues” (Sorcinelli, 2004) and make sure they are communicated.
  • Schedule an appointment to provide an overview to the tenure and promotion process. Anticipate the best time of the semester for the new faculty member to receive this information. | Ensure effective mentoring for the new faculty member. This may be in the form of assignment of a formal mentor/mentors (e.g., senior departmental faculty, mentors external to the department) or informal support to the new faculty member to set up his or her own career advising network. Additional resources about faculty mentoring can be found on the Office of the Provost UI Mentoring Clearinghouse.
  • When providing overview to the tenure and promotion process, clearly communicate exceptions for tenure-clock extensions. | Provide examples for how to collect and maintain tenure-related documentation that is up to date and catalogued in an organized dossier. (Bensimon, et al, 2000) | Create an intentional system to recognize new faculty excellence and nominate for various awards.
  Suggestions drawn from University of Washing ADVANCE program, include:
  • Keep a list of all possible awards for which you may wish to nominate your faculty, along with the nomination due dates;
  • During the annual review, ask the new faculty member about awards for which they would like to be nominated;
  • Another approach is to have a departmental committee whose job it is to nominate faculty members for internal and external awards.
  • Maintain a list of people who are in queue to be nominated for an award and share your intentions with the new faculty members. |
| Career Development | Leadership |  |  |  |
| Include departmental and campus resources for faculty (e.g., copy of Faculty Handbook, New Faculty Newsletter) in an official welcome letter.
  • Create a generic Faculty Development Plan to coordinate your role as DEO in supporting the new faculty member’s career development. This “DEO Strategies for Supporting Early Career Faculty” guide may offer useful ideas for sequencing your support.
  • Provide information about campus resources and arrange accommodations for faculty members with disabilities. | Provide new faculty members with a resource list of important campus offices, policies, and associations
  • Ensure that new faculty members are aware of upcoming New Faculty Orientation programs and support them in attending.
  • Encourage attendance at collegiate and Provost Office New Faculty Orientation programs to introduce the new faculty member to UI resources and services.
  • Provide orientation to departmental meetings, committees, and decision-making processes. | Facilitate departmental meetings in such a way as to support a new faculty member’s entrance in to the group. (E.g., ensure provide background on current issues, make transparent the ways in which faculty participate in decision-making). | Early in the first semester, take the new faculty member to lunch and informally discuss university policies and procedures and/or other university information presented in the new faculty orientation program.
  • Provide mentoring and information regarding departmentally appropriate ways to raise concerns. | Encourage involvement in national associations and committee; introduce new faculty to various methods for leadership in those associations.
  • Encourage new faculty members to assess their particular leadership style, strengths, and interests, and begin to discuss opportunities for making a rewarding contribution accordingly.*
